Summary of the Research Activities

I was a member of TIDOP at the University of Salamanca during my studying abroad. I went to the laboratory three to four days a week and every Friday we had a TIDOP seminar. In those seminars, I was allowed to present my research and I was given different opinions and assistance on my research from different perspectives. I was also shown other research being conducted by TIDOP members and learned about a tracking software models, which was particularly interested in.

My research includes an analysis of what potential factors are present in walking spaces. Professor Gonzalez and other members of TIDOP were very kind and accepting, offering advice on tracking methods and opinions on the research process. It was also a special study in TIDOP because of the unique way in which I conducted my analysis. Therefore, I am very happy to have been able to study at the University of Salamanca, where the members of TIDOP, who are researchers from a variety of fields, are exactly what I am looking for.

And I kept in touch with Professor Tanaka and other international students for advice on undergraduate graduation research and on my master's thesis after returning to Japan.

While continuing studying abroad in Spain, I also kept in touch with the members of the Spatial Design Laboratory and participated in competitions in Japan, and kept in close contact with the members of the laboratory about the projects being carried out by the Spatial Design Laboratory.

Language Meetup and Travel

One of the benefits is that Salamanca has a large student population. In the Salamanca, I attended a weekly language exchange meeting at a café a few minutes' walk from my flat. I wasn't very good at Spanish, but everyone welcomed me warmly, I made friends and it was an invaluable time. I also travelled to various places, both nationally and internationally, every weekend when I had time.
